ARNOLD COOMBS

COOMBS FAMILY FARMS

Arnold Coombs is the seventh generation of the Coombs family to practice the craft of sugaring. His first stop after coming home from the hospital as a newborn wasn't a crib - it was the sugarhouse where his father was boiling down the sap into maple syrup. Not surprisingly, Arnold was tapping Maple trees himself by the time he was eight. Today, as the head of Coombs

THE LAFLAMME FAMILY

PETE & GERRY'S ORGANIC EGGS

When predatory factory farms tried to run the family farm out of business, the Laflamme family turned to organic as a way to survive. Twenty-five years later, one of the first organic egg farms in the country is now also the largest organic egg brand in the country. But Pete and Gerry's Organic hasn't done that by becoming a factory farm themselves. They've done it

Who We Are

Stay Current

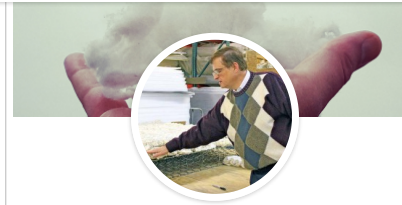

When Dr. Andrew Abraham was diagnosed with cancer at the age of 17, one of the biggest challenges he encountered was nutrition. The aggressive treatment made Andrew nauseous and he dropped to an alarming 100 pounds.

PIONEERS

In a college class, we learned mushrooms could grow entirely on spent coffee grounds. After watching hours of how-to videos and turning our fraternity kitchen into a big science experiment, we eventually decided to give up our corporate job offers to instead become full-time mushroom farmers. What started as curiosity about urban farming has turned into a passion to Undo Food™ and reconnect families back to where it comes from through fun and delicious ready to grow and ready to eat products.

BARRY CIK

NATUREPEDIC

Barry Cik is the founder of Naturepedic. An environmental engineer by trade published in his field, Barry founded Naturepedic after an eye-opening experience shopping for crib mattresses. Sent out by his wife prior to the birth of his first grandchild, Barry was shocked by the chemicals and questionable materials in the crib mattresses he found.
